

5 Fun Activities For Monitoring and Evaluation Trainings

www.annmurraybrown.com

01. M&E Escape Room

Learning Objective

To reinforce understanding of M&E concepts, data analysis, and critical thinking.

Activity

Create an "escape room" experience where participants must solve M&E-related puzzles to "escape." Puzzles can include decoding data collection methodologies, finding errors in a dataset, or interpreting results from a fictional program evaluation.

02. M&E Bingo

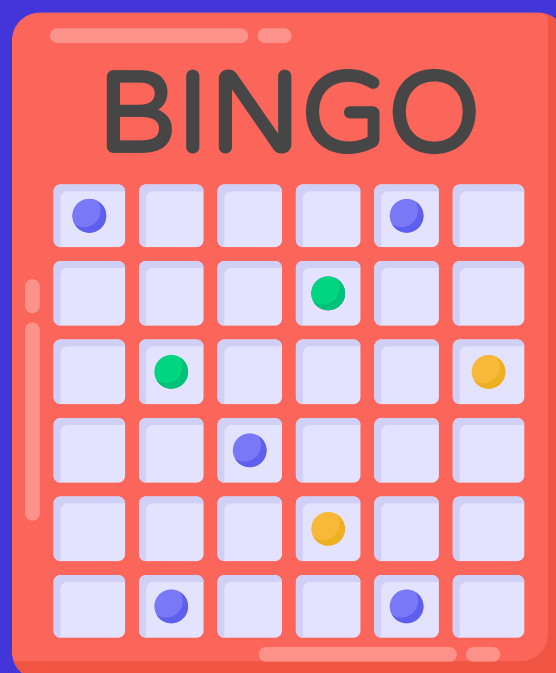

Learning Objective

To familiarize participants with key M&E terminology and concepts in a fun setting

Activity

Develop a bingo game with common M&E terms and concepts (e.g., baseline data, indicators, qualitative data).

Call out definitions or examples, and participants mark their cards if they have the matching term. The first participant to complete a row or pattern wins.

03. The Indicator Game

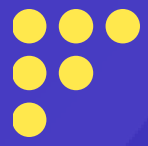

Learning Objective

To understand the importance of well-defined indicators in measuring program success.

Activity

Teams compete to develop the most relevant and measurable indicators for a given program objective. Other teams vote on the indicators based on their relevance, specificity, and measurability.

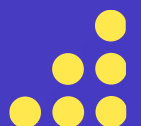

04 M&E Jeopardy

Learning Objective

To test and reinforce participants' knowledge of M&E in a competitive and fun environment.

Activity

Create a Jeopardy-style game with categories and questions related to M&E topics. Divide participants into teams and have them compete to answer questions correctly.

05. Role-play Interviews

Learning Objective

To practice qualitative data collection techniques and understand the nuances of gathering data through interviews.

Activity

In pairs, participants take turns role-playing as an evaluator and a program staff member. The evaluator conducts an interview to gather data on program implementation and outcomes.

Learn more at the webinar on Delivering Fun & Engaging
Monitoring and Evaluation
(M&E) Training

Register here: <https://rb.gy/i9ooh1>

www.annmurraybrown.com

